Robertson began the show chatting with Sheila Walsh about the Clarence Thomas confirmation and gloating about all the issues coming before the very conservative Supreme Court this term.

After a news story, Gary Bauer and Senator Trent Lott (R-Mississippi) joined Pat for a discussion of the confirmation.

Bauer:

For some time now, the left-wing has been losing at the polls. Now they're in danger of losing the other institutions here in Washington that they've controlled over the years. They see the Supreme Court slipping away from them. They realize more and more, I think, that the American people, when they're interested and tune in to these issues, inevitably come down on the conservative side, and I think we see some signs of desperation in the last week, as the far-left wing of American politics tried to engage in character assassination against Judge Thomas. . .

(discussion of new conservative agenda of the black community and how Thomas might vote, how he likes traditional values, etc.)

Robertson:

Let me ask you one question. I've had two Senators on this program, both from the Judiciary Committee and both pointed specifically to a staff aide who number one, apparently leaked the information on the FBI report and another one said specifically on this program last night from an address to the Senate that there was apparently, if I can use the term collusion, that these people actually told Anita Hill that there was going to be various types of sexual investigations going on, that she was being named, in other words they led her on with something that was false in order to elicit things from her and possibly to coach her in what has been said. Now that is serious. Are you going to back some kind of an FBI investigation for it?

Lott:

I'd certainly back some kind of an investigation because I think it is serious, I think it's wrong...There's no question that this was wrong, there's no question that staff of committees like Judiciary in the Senate, and Education and Labor in the Senate work hand in hand with the loony left throughout America. They exchange views and they orchestrate these things. Now, I'd like to think that conservatives try to orchestrate things too, but without, you know, really damaging people and without the kind of abuse of the process that we have seen here and we've seen in a lot of other instances.

Bauer:

Pat, I think the American people are just absolutely disgusted with this government by leaks. It's gone on for years in the United States. . . You know it came out earlier this week that the chief investigator for Senator Kennedy on the Education and Labor Committee who apparently was assigned the job of finding dirt on Judge Thomas had as his [SIC] previous job, Legal Director of People For the American Way, which is a far-out left-wing group, so there is a lot of collusion here, I think, some real patterns of left-wing groups being able to worm their way into the system in order to conduct these kinds of attacks.

Rev. Falwell gave a sermon on "The Nineties and the Homosexual Revolution."

Falwell described California as a "state on fire" after Governor Pete Wilson's veto of the Gay Rights Bill.

Some juicy quotations:

"This country's in revolution right now. And if you don't agree with them, they'll hurt you. The Governor of California's life has been threatened because he stands against sin."

(Falwell described being confronted by Gay Rights protesters at his hotel in California)

"They are everywhere. We got in the car at that back door headed for the airport...Then the driver started talking and I said "Oh my soul, I've got one driving this car."

-Report on Dr. Jack Kevorkian, and his assistance of two suicides with his machine. Kevorkian referred to as "Dr. Death."

-Report on the economy

-Report on the U. N.

CBN Report on Civil Rights for Homosexuals:

The report opened with a mention of states that have passed or tried to pass legislation making homosexuals a legally protected minority.

In Colorado, a group called Colorado Family Values (the president of which is a man named Kevin Tebedo) has started a campaign to pass by public referendum a state constitutional amendment which would prevent any law from passing giving homosexuals minority status and therefore specific legal protection. They hope to get the initiative on the ballot in 1992.

The reporter interviewed a black member of the Board of Colorado Family Values who said that civil rights protection for homosexuals was less important because homosexual households have a much higher average income than black households.

The referendum would "prohibit the state and its political subdivisions...from enacting, adopting or enforcing any law which provides...sexual orientation...[as] the basis of minority status, protected status, quota preferences or discrimination."

There is a strong possibility that the referendum will be challenged and perhaps brought to the Supreme Court.

Robertson:

...Sheila, there is nothing perverse or immoral about being black. These people were discriminated against and they need help in our society to get them to the status where they have equal opportunities, which is not true with a sex group...

Report on "fighting screen smut."

Guest: Ted Baehr, head of Christian Film and Television Commission in Atlanta, Georgia.

Baehr and Robertson discussed how many homosexuals and leftists are running Hollywood. This group claims to work with producers and writers at the networks to produce more family value-oriented programs. He says they had a writer on a cartoon program fired for introducing witchcraft into the program.
